TOPIC 1: ECONOMY

The recovery has started. Third-quarter GDP should rise 18% or so at an annual rate. But a sustained rebound will depend on continued progress against the novel coronavirus. Fortunately, infection rates appear to be declining in states that had experienced a summer surge, and previous progress in Northeastern and Midwestern states appears to be holding for now. However, there is the uncertainty of whether and when Congress will pass another economic stimulus bill, plus the drag from reductions in extra unemployment benefits and from businesses using up their PPP loan funds. Finally, the fact that initial unemployment claims are holding stubbornly above 1 million each week is an indication that future consumer spending may suffer if the labor market doesn't improve.

Reopening of businesses

It will likely be 2022 before the economy returns to its level at the end of 2019. Expect 2020 GDP to decline 4.9%, with a 3.8% rise in 2021.

GDP in the second quarter dropped 31.7% at an annual rate, slightly better than first reported. Consumer spending slumped by 34.1%, with the biggest declines in services, gasoline and clothing. However, spending on recreational goods and motor vehicles rose, as stimulus checks provided households with enough spare cash for fun items or a down payment on a car, SUV or pickup truck.

In fact, consumer disposable income rose 9.6% (non-annualized), even though total wages and salaries dropped 7.1%. Proprietor income was hit the hardest, falling 11.6%. Consumers hedged against the economic uncertainty by saving 26% of their income, a big leap from the 9.6% rate in the first quarter.

Business investment fell 28.9%, as businesses cut back their spending on equipment, buildings and inventories. The trade balance improved a small amount. Even though exports dropped 63.2% and imports fell "only" 54%, the overall trade balance improved because imports are so much bigger than exports.

Federal government spending supported the rest of the economy in the second quarter, rising 17.6%. State and local government spending declined 5.5%.

If gross domestic product is the broadest indicator of the economy, employment is the one most personally felt. Two distinct metrics make up the employment forecast. The more important one is the "payroll report," a summation by the Department of Labor of how many jobs the economy has created (or lost) each month. This data is broken out by sector, such as manufacturing, mining and health care. Note that simply to keep up with population growth, the economy needs to add more than 100,000 jobs every month; otherwise the unemployment rate will rise.

That rate is the other closely watched figure. It's a simple division of the number of people who have looked for work in the prior four weeks but who do not have a job by how many people are currently in the labor force. That simplicity belies some underlying concerns about the unemployment rate. One key one: Potential workers who aren't actively looking for work aren't included in the calculation.

The September jobs report showed worrisome signs that job growth is slowing. Employer's added 661,000 jobs, far fewer than August's 1.5 million. It appears that many of the businesses that had been recalling furloughed workers in large numbers as the economy reopened have finished doing so, removing a tailwind from the labor market. The unemployment rate fell to a still-painful 7.9%, and it could stay stubbornly high for a while. Some employers, particularly airlines, are starting to announce major layoffs. The sky isn't falling, but it seems clear that the jobs market has a long road back to good health.

Major recalls are still happening in a few industries, including retail, food service, social assistance, amusements and accommodations. These accounted for 515,000 of September's gains. They would have been higher except for a drop of 349,000 in school employment. 1.3 million fewer workers reported having to work part-time because of poor economic conditions. But initial unemployment claims were still high at 837,000 in the last week of September, and appear to be declining only slowly. Total unemployment is still 6.8 million higher than in February. Also, 4.5 million people, or what would be about 3% of the workforce, reported being unable to look for work because of the pandemic, and so were not reported as unemployed.

As more workers return, wage growth will likely be subdued. Hourly earnings rates are elevated right now because so many low-paid workers were laid off that it caused the average wage rate to jump for people who were still employed. As those low-paid jobs come back, the still-high unemployment rate is likely to lower wage growth from the 3%-3.5% trend seen before the coronavirus crisis. Lastly, Telecommuting will remain common for a while. 22.7% of workers were still telecommuting in September, down only a little from August's 24.3%.

TOPIC 4: EMPLOYMENT

The American Legion continues to track the anomalous veteran unemployment trends amidst the state-governments' response to the COVID-19 pandemic. As President Trump often says "the cure cannot be worse than the problem itself" in reference to the necessity of reopening the economy and several states' executive-authority overreach in their pandemic response. Veterans unemployment rate is becoming a casualty of the prolonged economic shutdown.

As the economy continued its rebound from the shock of COVID-19, the unemployment rate for all veterans showed slight improvement in September. The veteran jobless rate dropped to 6.4% from the 6.6% adjusted rate for August. However, the jobless rate for post-9/11 veterans rose to 7.5% in September from 7% the month before, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The overall veteran unemployment rate continued to outperform the national rate, which was 7.9% in September, down from 8.4% in August, the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics announced. The 7.9% national figure marked the fifth consecutive month of decline since unemployment peaked at 14.7% in April, when the first effects of COVID-19 forced business closures and layoffs. "These improvements in the labor market reflect the continued resumption of economic activity that had been curtailed due to the coronavirus pandemic," BLS said of the September report.

The unemployment rate for post-9/11 veterans, classified as Gulf War II-era veterans by BLS, is still nearly double what it was a year ago, 4.5%, when the economy was booming. The group is considered the most vulnerable to downturns in the economy. The rate for male post-9/11 veterans in September was 7.8%; for female post-9/11 veterans, it was 5.7%.

Gulf War I-era veterans of the 1990s had an unemployment rate of 6.1% in September. World War II, Korea and Vietnam veterans overall had an unemployment rate of 4.4%, BLS said.

"Employment continued to increase in several industries, with the largest gains in leisure and hospitality, in retail trade, in health care and social assistance, and in professional and business services," BLS Commissioner William Beach said in a statement on the September report.

The initial BLS report for August put the unemployment rate for all veterans at 6.4%, but it was later adjusted to 6.6%. "The veteran unemployment rate is still well below the general unemployment rate, but it fell only slightly from August to September, from 6.6% to 6.4%," said Robert Frick, the corporate economist at the Navy Federal Credit Union, in a statement. "Compared to one year ago, there are about 700,000 more veterans unemployed."

TOPIC 5: VETERAN HOUSING AND HOMELESSNESS

The American Legion is often the conduit that brings together state and federal government with private sector to assist veterans. Public/private partnerships are necessary to find new and innovative solutions to solve complex issues like homelessness. Headquartered in Phoenix Arizona,

American Affordable Housing is dedicated to improving and sustaining the viability of Phoenix through the development of job training and personal empowerment programs.

American Real Estate Investment Club LLC. (AREICLLC.COM) has created a new branch company called “American Affordable Housing” to develop permanent housing for Homeless Veterans in the central neighborhood of Phoenix, Arizona. The company plans to flagship their Homeless Veteran's program nationwide.

According to legend, the phoenix is a mythical bird that represents a symbol of hope, renewal, rebirth, immortality, resurrection, solitude, and grace. Just as the phoenix emerges from the ashes, so can homeless veterans after enduring hardships, problems, and or decline, rise from the ashes with renewed ambitious, meaningful and productive life in society. In collaboration with local communities: organizations, Private Sector, VA and other various agencies, we will offer a comprehensive smart home residence with on-site services in a 6-story community. The site will be conveniently located within walking distance to supermarkets, recreation center and the local VA Clinic.

The residential apartments will average 475 square feet, including: personal kitchens, bathrooms and living spaces. Supportive services will be provided by Safe Haven, LLC. whose expertise includes: providing services for the special needs and the mentally challenged. The project will expand the supply of the greatly needed permanent housing solution for Homeless Veterans including Mental health and substance abuse programs. All this requires a collaborative approach.

“This long over-due flagship project will provide the much needed shelter providing essential services for homeless Veterans beginning in Phoenix Arizona and developing throughout the U.S.,” says Doug Evans who is the Project Manager and Vice President of AREIC and American Affordable Housing. “Not only will American Affordable Housing offer help to our Veterans but in truth, when we help veterans, we are helping ourselves: becoming the change we want to see.”

TOPIC 7a: SMALL BUSINESS

The American Legion continues to track negotiations for a second COVID-19 stimulus package. The Economic Injury Disaster Loan (EIDL) and Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) was vital to veteran small businesses and nonprofit organizations. However, often overlooked is the Federal Reserve's Main Street Lending Program (MSLP). The American Legion's Department and Posts are also eligible for MSLP loans as long as they meet the eligibility criteria.

The Main Street Lending Program was established with the approval of the Treasury Secretary and with $75 billion in equity provided by the Treasury Department from the CARES Act. The Federal Reserve Board expanded its Main Street Lending Program to allow more small and medium-sized businesses to be able to receive support. The Board lowered the minimum loan amount, raised the maximum loan limit, adjusted the principal repayment schedule to begin after two years, and extended the term to five years, providing borrowers with greater flexibility in repaying the loans. The Board expects the Main Street program to be open for lender registration soon and to be actively buying loans shortly afterwards.

Small and medium-sized businesses are a vital part of the economy and because their needs vary widely, the Board sought feedback and revised the Main Street program accordingly. These changes include:

- Lowering the minimum loan size for certain loans to $250,000 from $500,000;
- Increasing the maximum loan size for all facilities;
- Increasing the term of each loan option to five years, from four years;
- Extending the repayment period for all loans by delaying principal payments for two years, rather than one; and
- Raising the Reserve Bank's participation to 95% for all loans.

Once they have successfully registered for the program, lenders are encouraged to begin making Main Street loans immediately. MSLP intends to purchase 95% of each eligible loan that is submitted to the program, provided that the required documentation is complete and the transactions are consistent with the relevant Main Street facility's requirements. The Main Street Lending Program will also accept loans that were originated under the previously announced terms, if funded before June 10, 2020.

The Main Street Lending Program is also eligible for nonprofit organizations such as educational institutions, hospitals, and social service organizations. The Board approved two new loan options to provide support to a broad set of nonprofit organizations that were in sound financial condition prior to the pandemic.

Based on public feedback to proposals released for comment on June 15, the minimum employment threshold for nonprofits was lowered from 50 employees to 10, the limit on donation-based funding was eased, and several financial eligibility criteria were adjusted to accommodate a wider range of nonprofit operating models. Additionally, like the proposed terms, each organization must be a tax-exempt organization as described in section 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(19) of the Internal Revenue Code.

The Main Street nonprofit loan terms mirror those for MSLP business loans, including the interest rate, principal and interest payment deferral, five-year term, and minimum and maximum loan sizes.

According to the Bob Woodward Foundation, “the most immediate indirect needs for veterans in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic are likely to be economic needs related to job loss.” Our projections suggest that large numbers of veterans are likely to become unemployed, at rates that could surpass the highest level of veteran unemployment in the post-9/11 era.

According to an economic analysis published by Moody’s Analytics in March 2020, the five industries most likely to witness immediate layoffs as a result of COVID-19 are:

- Mining, oil, and gas extraction (establishments that extract naturally occurring mineral solids);
- Transportation and warehousing (establishments that transport goods or passengers, warehouse goods, or provide scenic and sightseeing transportation);
- Employment services (establishments that list employment vacancies or refer/place people in employment);
- Travel arrangements (establishments that provide travel arrangement and reservation services, excluding travel agencies or tour operators); and
- Leisure and hospitality (establishments that meet cultural, entertainment, and recreational interests of their patrons, like museums or spectator sports, or that provide customers with lodging, like hotels, or prepared food/beverages for immediate consumption, like restaurants or bars).

As of February 2020, in the United States, these industries employed 27 million people, representing 17.7 percent of the entire American employed workforce. Using recent data from the Current Population Survey, [the Foundation] estimates that 1.2 million veterans are employed in these industries. This represents approximately 14 percent of veterans employed in civilian jobs. Of the veterans employed in these vulnerable industries, 39 percent (nearly 500,000) served after September 11, 2001; 15 percent of the working post-9/11 veteran population is employed in these industries. TOPIC 8: EDUCATION

The owner of a California trucking school was sentenced to four years in prison on Tuesday for a GI Bill scam which drew more than $4 million in fraudulent payments from the Department of Veterans Affairs over four years.

Emmit Marshall, 53, pled guilty to the charges in July 2019 but was not sentenced until last week. During his sentencing hearing, the judge blasted Marshall’s actions as “very serious fraud” and “calculated, criminal acts that cannot be condoned.”

Court officials said he used the Alliance School of Trucking to recruit veterans for truck driving classes but provided no actual education benefits. Instead, he collected the tuition money and some veterans received housing stipends under the post-9/11 GI Bill program, even though none attended classes.

In some cases, Marshall used veterans' personal information to sign them up for the fake courses without permission and forged signatures.

The scheme ran from July 2011 to April 2015. When VA officials began investigating the suspicious activity, school officials encouraged the “students” to lie to department staff and worked to destroy records of the fraud.'

Prosecutors said the scheme netted about $1 million for Marshall personally, money he used “for jewelry, a cruise, a trip to Hawaii, property taxes on his [California] residence, purchase of a Ford F-150 and purchase of semi-tractor trailers for a new business.”

Marshall’s co-defendant in the case, trucking school vice president Robert Waggoner, pled guilty to similar charges in February and is expected to be sentenced next March.

Department of Justice officials did not say whether any of the veterans who participated in the scheme will face potential criminal charges.

The fraud case comes just a few weeks after an Oregon businessman was sentenced to three and a half years in prison for soliciting more than $4 million in illegal kickbacks as part of a scheme involving contracting work focused on wounded veterans and troops.

In that case, court records showed that Brodie Shaw Thomson created fake business plans and hid side payments on numerous contracts for his own personal gain.

The depth of the fraud committed by the Alliance School of Trucking demonstrates the vigilance that must be maintained to ensure veterans success.

The owner of a California trucking school was sentenced to four years in prison on Tuesday for a GI Bill scam which drew more than $4 million in fraudulent payments from the Department of Veterans Affairs over four years.

Emmit Marshall, 53, pled guilty to the charges in July 2019 but was not sentenced until last week. During his sentencing hearing, the judge blasted Marshall’s actions as “very serious fraud” and “calculated, criminal acts that cannot be condoned.”

Court officials said he used the Alliance School of Trucking to recruit veterans for truck driving classes but provided no actual education benefits. Instead, he collected the tuition money and some veterans received housing stipends under the post-9/11 GI Bill program, even though none attended classes.

In some cases, Marshall used veterans' personal information to sign them up for the fake courses without permission and forged signatures.
